

Resources for Military Spouses - professional license and credential finder portal for military spouses.

LAUNCHED END OF JUNE BY DEPT OF LABOR:

The new webpage Veterans.gov/milspouses brings together occupational license portability resources from across the federal government in one place and highlights states with licensing rights for military spouses. It is the result of collaborative work of the Department's Employment and Training Administration; Office of the Assistant Secretary for Policy; VETS; and Women's Bureau, and the Department of Defense.

"Military spouses serve alongside our nation's servicemen and women. States should act to remove excessive regulatory barriers to work, so that our military spouses can help support their families," said U.S. Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta. "This new site highlights states' efforts to help military spouses secure good, family-sustaining jobs."

Military spouses can search directly on the portal for guidelines and state laws on professional licensing, including information on how occupational licenses from one state can be recognized in another. The page features a map that shows which states offer temporary licensing, expedited licensing, or licensure by endorsement for relocating spouses.
